Type: Meditation

Keywords: mindfulness, awareness, attention

Goal
- This exercise learns how to pay attention, on purpose, in each moment, and without judgment.
- This exercise is done several times a day. Clients become aware of how little attention is usually paid to daily life. They are taught to become aware of how quickly the mind shifts from one topic to another.
- Clients learn how, having noticed that the mind is wandering, to bring it back to a single focus.

Description: A written instruction to guide a three-minute breathing space meditation

Comments
- Inform your client that it is normal to get distracted by sound, thoughts, a sensations. It is not possible to do the exercise “right” or “wrong”. Let go of striving.
- Ask your client to be kind to him/herself if he or she gets distracted. Notice what distracts you and gently turn the attention back to the exercise.

1. Awareness

“The first thing we do with this practice, because it’s brief and we want to come into the moment quickly, is to take a very definite posture … relaxed, dignified, back erect, but not stiff, letting our bodies express a sense of being present and awake.

“Now, closing your eyes, if that feels comfortable for you, the first step is being aware, really aware, of what is going on with you right now. Becoming aware of what is going through your mind; What thoughts are around? Here, again, as best you can, just noting the thoughts as mental events…. So we note them, and then we note the feelings that are around at the moment … in particular, turning toward any sense of discomfort or unpleasant feelings. So rather than try to push them away or shut them out, just acknowledge them, perhaps saying, “Ah, there you are, that’s how it is right now.” And similarly with sensations in the body…. Are there sensations of tension, of holding, or whatever? And again, awareness of them, simply noting them. OK, that’s how it is right now.

2. Gathering

“So, we’ve got a sense of what is going on right now. We’ve stepped out of automatic pilot. The second step is to collect our awareness by focusing on a single object—the movements of the breath. So now we really gather ourselves, focusing attention down there in the movements of the abdomen, the rise and fall of the breath … opening a minute or so to focus on the movement of the abdominal wall … moment by moment, breath by breath, as best we can. So that you know when the breath is moving in, and you know when the breath is moving out. Just binding your awareness to the pattern of movement down there … gathering yourself, using the anchor of the breath to really be present.

3. Expanding

“And now as a third step, having gathered ourselves to some extent, we allow our awareness to expand. As well as being aware of the breath, we also include a sense of the body as a whole. So that we get this more spacious awareness…. A sense of the body as a whole, including any tightness or sensations related to holding in the shoulders, neck, back, or face … following the breath as if your whole body is breathing. Holding it all in this slightly softer … more spacious awareness.

“And then, when you are ready, just allowing your eyes to open.

“Any questions or comments about that?”
Basic Instructions (for client)

1. Awareness

Bring yourself into the present moment by deliberately adopting an erect and dignified posture. If possible, close your eyes. Then ask: “What is my experience right now … in thoughts … in feelings … and in bodily sensations?” Acknowledge and register your experience, even if it is unwanted.

2. Gathering

Then, gently redirect full attention to breathing, to each inbreath and to each outbreath as they follow, one after the other. Your breath can function as an anchor to bring you into the present and help you tune into a state of awareness and stillness.

3. Expanding

Expand the field of your awareness around your breathing, so that it includes a sense of the body as a whole, your posture, and facial expression. The breathing space provides a way to step out of automatic pilot mode and reconnect with the present moment. The key skill in using MBCT is to maintain awareness in the moment. Nothing else.
